Abstract:
The present invention introduces a revolutionary helmet attachment system that addresses challenges associated with conventional helmets, including hair damage, discomfort, and exposure to varying climatic conditions. The invention pioneers a novel approach by replacing the traditional hard polycarbonate helmet circumference with a circumference crafted from natural vetiver root material. This innovation not only imparts cooling effects but also enhances hair protection. Additionally, the invention incorporates a foldable polyester cover that envelops and safeguards the hair, ensuring optimal user comfort and convenience. By substituting the rigid polycarbonate helmet circumference with natural vetiver root material, the invention introduces cooling benefits and enhances hair protection, effectively addressing the discomfort and potential risks associated with conventional helmets. The foldable polyester cover further shields the hair, countering the impact of external climatic factors. The distinctive attributes and innovative solutions outlined in this invention set it apart from existing technologies, positioning it as a notable contribution to the domain of protective headgear.
